In attracting the attention of the public to this event amusement he begs to quote the opinion of THE NEW YORK HERALD.

THE WINTER GARDEN-OPENING NIGHT—A theatrical three properties of the performances. The WINTER GARDEN OF THE WIN terprise, having much of originality in its inception, with an agreeable freshness and norely in its details, was insugarised last night under the combined direction of Messus. Stuart and Bournicauli, whose efforts—we may say very extensive the forts—at the entertainment of our public, have recombined the strong hold upon its affections. From them we may always expect something new, some defiance of the old stage traditions, a sort of pleasing andactiv which never fails to command attention, and that, in theatrical matters, is the twin sister of success.
